

When cancer and significant illness crash into the world of a young person its impact can be felt across the community. Canteen aims to improve the community's understanding of how cancer and chronic illness can impact young people, and to help support families.

With support from Metricon, Canteen provides support and education to parents, schools and health professionals so that ultimately all young people affected have the best outcomes.

Detailed information about each area of community education is shown below. Check out our website learn.canteen.org.au for upcoming live webinars, or links for past recorded webinars.

Our workshops

Parenting through Illness

We know that parenting is a tough enough job without adding a life limiting or life impacting illness into the mix. That's why, together with support from Metricon, we've developed a series of online webinars on Parenting through Illness that offer practical tools, strategies, resources and services that can help. Webinars and Youtube videos listed below.

Videos Available on YouTube

- Parenting through Illness
- Parenting through End of Life and into Bereavement
- Parenting through Illness & COVID
- Parenting through Holiday Seasons

Education Professionals Training & Student Education program

This training has been developed to assist educators and other school professionals in understanding the impact of cancer on young people, how they can help a student, where to get further support for their school, and how Canteen can help young people. The student education program also assists young people in how to support a friend impacted by cancer.

If your school could benefit from the insights we have from working with young people, and the support required at school for your students, please register for an upcoming webinar, watch a past webinar, or book in a session that can be tailored for your team.

Health Care Professionals Education

The Health Professionals Education has been developed to assist health professionals in understanding the significant impact of cancer on the family, particularly young people, and what they can do to help. If you and/or your team could benefit from the insights we have from working with young people, and their families, and the strategies and questions that could assist in those early days of diagnosis, please register for an upcoming webinar, watch the pre-recorded version, or book in a session that can be tailored for your team. To get you started you can also watch our short videos on our Youtube channel.
